

Crockenhill

Countryside Access

Crockenhill is a rural village in Sevenoaks. Its earliest documented history starts in 1388, when the village, or hamlet as it was then, was known as Crockern-Held, which translates as “the hill where stands a pottery kiln”.

The Crockenhill Heritage Trail booklet is available on Crockenhill Parish Council website.

A longer walk of 6.5 miles can be downloaded from the website of the Eynsford and Crockenhill Rights of Way Group:

canderamblers.org.uk/whats-on-locally-news/

More information about opportunities for recreation in the parish’s countryside is available from the following:

kentramblers.org.uk – information about walking in Kent and details of guidebooks to help you on your way explorekent.org – information about outdoor leisure opportunities in Kent

The Crockenhill Parish Council website

sevenoaksramblers.org.uk – for led walks in good company

Visit the Explore Kent
website

Visit the Kent Ramblers’
website